- New Zealand Herald

<https://www.nzherald.co.nz/>

The New Zealand Herald is a daily news website. The layout for the site when first entering is three main columns, two using images with text in different sizes and one on the end as just text, making the layout feel quite busy. Scrolling down the layout changes to the three columns all using images with text on top of the image which makes the layout look more organised. A red banner also runs along the top of the page showcasing the more “important” news as well as a navigation bar that runs down the side. Something inconvenient about the site is that 7 out of the 15 “featured” stories on the home page are premium making them unavailable without a monthly subscription. Another inconvenience to the site is when searching for a topic the results are not newest to oldest and there is no filter to arrange it like that.

Lila by liv is a small fashion blog based in New Zealand that focuses on sustainable fashion . The layout for the site is fairly basic with a white as the main colour and standard text. The images on the website are fairly large, used as the main feature of the site, but when the screen is full screen the images are being cut off at the bottom. The headings for the blog posts are just to the side of all the images and are easy to read and access articles. At the top there is a small navigation bar which has different categories as well as being able to keep scrolling to the first blog post uploaded onto the site.

Magazines:

- Highsnobiety

<https://www.highsnobiety.com/>

Highsnobiety is a German based streetwear blog, which covers trends in fashion, art, music and culture. The first thing seen when entering the site is one main image that fades into another showing the main articles. Scrolling down from that the website uses a one column layout with small images and titles. The navigation bar at the top categorises the subjects and articles as well as featuring a valentines gift tab, which alternates through different holidays. When using the search bar, all the results are in newest to oldest unlike the new zealand herald website.
